Oil Nut Bay

Accessible by boat or helicopter, this 300-acre development at the northern

Casa de Campo

► THIS 7,000-ACRE oceanfront resort community, located on the southeastern coast of the Dominican Republic, offers homesites and Caribbean-style villas and condos surrounded by sugarcane fields and a maritime forest. The property includes a tennis club and fields for skeet, clay, and trap shooting, but the three Pete Dye golf courses (including the 6,770-yard Teeth of the Dog) are the resort's biggest draw. However, for Phyllis Berney, a full-time resident originally from Wisconsin, it was the community's multiculturalism that attracted her and her late husband to the community in 1983. "Whenever I have a dinner party," she says, "my guest list almost always includes a mix of Americans, Dominicans, Europeans, and Canadians."
